

108322 Pragmatics and Discourse Analysis (3 CH) (P 108222)

This course is an introduction to main theories in pragmatics and language use focusing through relevant exercises on the situation of context and context of situation. Students are introduced to the speech acts theory, cooperative principles, Grice's maxims, text act theory, implicature and the relationship between pragmatics and other disciplines such as semantic, the communicative theory and semiotics. Students also analyse different genres and registers in terms of text grammar, sentence grammar, text and intertext, context, reference, deixis, style, cohesion, coherence, situationality and intertextuality. Students are specially engaged in relevant translation exercises.